TEMPLARY

Our mission is a high and noble one, and our influence should extend wider and wider, and its effects not cease to be felt while earth shall endure. Let us, therefore, each act our part that when we lay by our knightly armor for the last time, we shall be sustained and soothed by a consciousness of this life's duties well performed and the confident hope of another life.

REFRESHMENTS

TEMPLARY—Is there an American heart that does not feel the impulse of patriotic love as he looks upon the old flag, and reads thereon the history of past struggles for the right? Why, he learns from that history that he is a sovereign. Why, men fight and die for the principles represented by that noble old flag, and count it the highest honor, if at the last they may be wrapped in its beautiful folds and laid away in the silent grave. It tells the whole world of "the land of the free and the home of the brave" and the asylum of the oppressed. Is there no power in that emblem to fire the youthful heart and constrain the old man to wish he was young again when the principles it represents are endangered?

TEMPLARY

Sirs, rivet your armor about you; nail your banner to the standard; draw your sword for the right, and throw away the scabbard, and go forth to certain victory. The cross will take the world. Be entreated that you live beneath its influences; walk in its light; rest in its shadows; and when life's work is done, its last battle having been fought and won, lay you down at the foot of the cross and die; and He, whose right it is, will present you to His Father, to be crowned with glory and immortality.
